

Karene Richards, CFA
CEO, The Karene Group LLC

Karene Richards is a capital markets expert, women's advocate and fitness competitor with over 16 years' experience in the investment banking industry. Karene most notably built the first Carbon Finance model for the World Bank and led the issuance of fixed income transactions at JPMorgan. She received a Master of Financial Mathematics and Statistics from Columbia University and an undergraduate degree in Electrical Engineering from Howard University. Karene is also the former CEO of The Association for Women In Science a 100,000 member and affiliates organization that advocates for women in STEM. In 2019, Karene was named the Most Influential People of African Descent under 40 by the United Nations. She is a CFA Charterholder and currently serves on the Board for both The Association for Women in Science and The National Speakers Association.